

CURRICULUM AND EXAMINATION DEVELOPMENT BOARD

What does the Curriculum and Examination Development Board (CEDB) do?

The CEDB develops training curricula and certification examinations for a specific trade.

What makes up a CEDB?

Recommended by the Trade Board, the CEDB consist of employers, employees, which should be on-the-tools journeypersons, and a SATCC representative. The CEDB doesn't require equal representation from employers and employees.

How often do they meet?

The CEDB meets on an "as-needed" basis, typically one to four times per year depending on the development cycle of the trade.

What are CEDBs responsible for?

Individual CEDB member responsibilities are to:

- assist in developing and revising the apprenticeship program curriculum for their trade to reflect current industry needs;
- assist in developing and revising the curriculum or upgrading, updating and other training to keep journeypersons and other tradespersons current;
- assist in developing and revising all journeyperson, proficiency, placement (level) or term-end examinations for their trade to ensure that the current needs of industry are met;
- participate in developing and validating interprovincial journeyperson examinations for their trade; and
- provide program advisory committee functions for the SATCC.
